Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Memoirs and Verses of John H. Alexander Last June he received a slight stroke of paralysis from which he never recovered; although at times he rallied, he has been gradually sinking since. He was born September 25, on the French Broad River, Greene County, Tennessee. He was the third son of James Russell Alexander, who served as Judge of the Circuit Court for twelve years, in Franklin, Indiana. Mr. Alexander was raised on a farm, where he developed a strong physique. He had hoped to go to college, but his father's heavy losses in the panic of 1837 made it necessary for him to stay at home. Though deprived of this boon, he was not disconcerted, and set about to acquire an education as best he could. He always carried a little pocket dictionary and would look up and study the meaning of any new word he might hear. Moving to St. Louis in 1844, he entered the employ of the Wholesale firm of J. H. Gay Co. As office boy. Here, by close application to business, attending night school, and by using every means at his command to cultivate and develop himself, he was rapidly promoted. In 1849 he caught the gold fever, and joining with a large party, he started across the plains for the golden State. After the usual experiences of such a journey, driving oxen by day, and fighting off Indians by night, he arrived in the northern part of the State after having been six months on the road. He went immediately to the mines, where he did quite well; but the work there completely broke down his health and he returned to...
